The Zemstvo Project

Few countries can rival Russia with respect to the volume and variety of statistical material concerning agrarian development and peasantry in the nineteenth century. The first Zemstvo statistical studies began around 1870, but the main bulk of this work was carried out in two relatively brief periods, the mid-1880s and 1906 to 1914. Starting in the early 1890s, relations between the Zemstvo statisticians and the local officials deteriorated, the work of the statisticians was obstructed and the amount of published material dropped sharply. After 1905, conditions improved and a wide range of topics were studied, including public health, education, and industry; however, the main topic was the agricultural economy. The statisticians interviewed an estimated total of 4,5 million peasant families and the list covering this work included about 3,500 questions.

Unfortunately up to now, it has been impossible for researchers to fully utilize this abundant material, because these publications are widely dispersed. In addition, Soviet historians have long avoided using or publishing original sources that might throw new light on the official interpretation of agrarian affairs in Russia before the 1917 revolution. The availability of many microfiche editions of source materials will be a great improvement.

Not only has the Zemstvo card catalogue been made available to IDC for microfiching, but IDC also has a contract for microfiche publication of any title in the Zemstvo Library of the Saltykov-Shchedrin Library.

The objective of the present project is to achieve a systematic microfiche edition of the statistical material published by the Zemstvo, as well as general works and local studies in the field of agrarian development and peasantry in nineteenth century Russia, not all of which were covered by the Zemstvo. The project will produce a selected collection and provide scholars with a research source of prime importance.

It is obvious that the card catalogue will provide a unique opportunity to make selections from the rich collection accessible. Librarians and scholars are invited to make suggestions for titles which may be included in the project.

The card catalogue

The catalogue, which consists of about 110,000 cards, has three sections:

1. Alphabetical author-title catalogue (IDC no.: R-18,497)
